RECOMMENDATION

1. That the Board receive this report pursuant to Section 31(1)(j) of the Police Services Act, Board By-Law No. 01-11 respecting the Administration of the Complaints System under Part V of the Police Services Act.

SYNOPSIS

Each year, a semi-annual report on Public Complaints is filed in accordance with the Board's direction.

In the first six months of 2014, 58 complaints were received against 90 members of York Regional Police, compared to 71 complaints against 84 members for the same period in 2013. The additional 16 complaints are currently under investigation. No discipline has arisen out of complaints received during this reporting period.

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS

Not applicable.

BACKGROUND

Section 31 (b) of Ontario Regulation 3/99, made under The Police Services Act - Adequacy and Effectiveness of Police Services, requires the Board to receive a report on Public Complaints annually. In accordance with the Board's direction, a semi-annual report is also filed.

The Police Services Act states that a member of the public may complain about the conduct of an officer or officers, or about the policies of or services provided by a police force.

On October 19, 2009, the OIPRD, governed by Ontario Regulation 263/09 and Part V of The Police Services Act, took over responsibility for the intake, processing and managing of Public Complaints in Ontario. As a result, all Public Complaints made against members of York Regional Police must be received by the OIPRD. OIPRD encourages members of the public to first discuss their complaint directly with the police service. As a result, there are three methods available to the public to address their complaint:

1. Local Discussion
2. Local Resolution
3. Formal Public Complaint

A Local Discussion involves the complainant making contact directly with the police service and discussing their complaint with a front-line supervisor. A Local Discussion occurs when the complainant does not wish to pursue the complaint beyond advising the supervisor of their concerns. This method encourages informal discussion and promotes an increased level of understanding between the police and the complainant. OIPRD is not involved in Local Discussions.

A Local Resolution involves similar contact directly with the police service. This process involves proposing a resolution of the complaint which is agreeable to both the complainant and the officer. This Local Resolution is documented on an OIPRD form. Once completed, this form is forwarded to OIPRD and the Chief of Police for their approval.

A Formal Public Complaint requires that the complainant complete an OIPRD Complaint Form at either a police station, or via the OIPRD website. Once this complaint form is signed and submitted to OIPRD, OIPRD will classify the complaint, make a decision whether to accept it, and then assign it for investigation. The OIPRD assigns Public Complaint investigations in one of three ways:

- They will refer the complaint back to the originating police service for investigation.
- They will assign the complaint to another police service for investigation.
- They will retain the complaint and investigate it themselves.

OIPRD has the authority to screen incoming complaints and if they choose, can refuse to accept a Public Complaint. When OIPRD makes a decision not to accept a Public Complaint, their reasons fall into five categories:

- Frivolous
- Better dealt with by another act or law
- Not in the public interest
- Complainant not directly affected
- Over 6 months

Once a Public Complaint has been accepted and assigned for investigation, there are four ways for the complaint to be resolved:

1. Withdrawn by the complainant
2. Unsubstantiated following an investigation
3. Resolved by way of Informal Resolution
4. Misconduct is identified and disciplinary action is initiated.

As the attached charts indicate, 58 public complaints were made against members of York Regional Police during the first six months of 2014, compared to 71 in 2013. This is a decrease of 18% over the same period last year. Of the 58 Public Complaints received:

- 32 complaints were not accepted by the OIPRD:
 - 6 were deemed to be better dealt with under a different act or law
 - 1 was deemed not directly affected
 - 5 were deemed to be over 6 months
 - 20 was deemed: Not in the public interest
- 6 were withdrawn by the complainant
- 0 were unsubstantiated following a York Regional Police investigation
- 4 complaints were dealt with by Informal Resolution
- 16 complaints are still under investigation by York Regional Police

York Region is one of the fastest growing regions in Canada. As a result of the growth in the region and York Regional Police, there is an increase of occasions where our members are interacting with the public through various means, including but not limited to investigations, calls for service and regular inquiries from the public. Continuing efforts are made by members of the Professional Standards Bureau to educate and train our staff members about the Public Complaints process by making presentations to recruit classes, coach officer classes, and civilian and supervisor training workshops. The intention is to familiarize members with the complaint investigation process, as well as to discuss the common reasons that complaints are made in an effort to reduce or eliminate public complaints about officers.
